WOES OF A THIRD WIFE. MRS. GUNNING ASKS A SEPARATION BECAUSE OF CRUELTY.

Though She Rubbed Her Reverend and Medical Husband Dales with Turkish Towels, He Resented a Love Pat One Morning and Blacked One of Her Eyes, The public ventilation of the troubles of the Rev. Dr. Josiah H. Gunning and his third wife, Mary C. Gunning, was begun yesterday with the trial of Mrs. Gunning's suit for a separation before Justice Augustus Van Wyck in the Su preme Court in Prooklyn. The couple were married in this city on June 21, 1886. Dr. Gun ning was pastor of the Harvard Street Baptist sch in Boston at the time, and his bride was the soprano in the choir. Dr. Gunning was lso President of the American Protective League, an insurance organization, and he occasionally practised medicine, to which profession he had devoted himself before he entered the ministry.

He had five children by his two previous marriages, but their presence in the household with his comparatively young wife did not apparently have any disturbing influence until Dr. Gunning, in 1892, gave up his Boston charge and became the pastor of the Bedford Avenue Baptist Church in Brooklyn. Friction then began in the family, and continued to manifest tself more or less until March, 1895, when Mrs stepchildren and went to her relatives in Boston. Soon after the domestic upheaval Dr. Gunning resigned his pastorate and resumed the practice of medicine at 423 Lafayette avenue. Strenuous efforts were made by mutual church friends from time to time to bring Dr. Gunning and his wife again together, but they

There was a large audience, mainly composed of members of the Bedford avenue church, in the court room yesterday. Half a dozen female sympathizers surrounded Mrs. Gunning, who is a handsome brunette and much younger than the gray-haired, but well-preserved defendant who was flanked by his three pretty daughters, Gussie, Grace, and Marion, all less than twenty years old. The lawyers included ex-United States District Attorney Ass W. Tenney and John A. Anderson for the plaintiff and ex-Corporation Counsel Almet F, Jenks and John A. Bullwinkle for the defendant.

Mr. Tenney said that the couple had lived a happy life in Boston, Mrs. Gunning playing the plane, organ, and violin, and assisting her husband in his ministerial and tay duties. In Brooklyn, the lawyer said, Dr. Gunning's son began to shoot at the servants now and then nd to purloin from people in the house, espe-'w from Mrs. Gunning. The son refused to bey his stepmother, throwing her to the floor and stamping upon her. He called her by op-probrious names, and when she claimed protec-tion from her husband he told her that his son had called her no names that she did not de-serve, and said that she should go South. The son continued in his wicked course, and the wife was ignored and finally was struck by her hus-band serve, and said that she should go South. The son continued in his wicked course, and the wife was ignored and finally was struck by her husband.

"She was treated brutally," Mr. Tenney conlined, "more brutally than any other woman lever heard of in a Christian family. Friends bried to intercede for her, but in vain. She was broken down in health, and finally left the house without a penny and without spare clothing. You will see whether this woman, this modest, Christian woman, has left her home without any cause."

Mrs. Gunning was the first witness. She gave her testimony in a clear, musical voice. She haid she went from Little Rock, Ark., to Boston to study music two years before her marriage and became the sobrano in the Harvard Street Church, of which Dr. Gunning was pastor. At the time of her marriage Dr. Gunning's children were Homer, 18 years old, by the first wife, and by the second wife, Henry, aged 11; Gussle 10, Grace 8, and Marion 5. The four younger children made their home with her. Until November, 1893, her husband had been always kind and considerate toward her, and the children were also kind to her. In referring to her life in Boston, Mrs. Gunning was moved to tears.

"I gave up," she said. "all outside interests when I went into the home, and was glad to do it for my husband's sake. In Brooklyn as well as in Boston I took care of the Rev. Dr. Gunning's children was nervous. About a year before our separation he refused to let me rub his head, although I offered to do so."

Harry, her stenson, she said, came to Brooklyn in 1893, and he had not been long in the house when she noticed that he began to rummage in the bureau drawers. She missed so many articles that she finally threatened to complain to the police authorities. Dr. Gunning told her she was a wicked woman and that she would have to bear her losses. Her violin, as silk shawl, a pair of opera glasser, and some money and jewelry were among the articles she missed. Harry denied all knowledge of them and declared that he would remain i wall at our house at the time of the conversation."

The witness said that one day, while Dr. Gunning was preparing his sermon in his study, he told her she was a beggar and that she had better go back to the South, where she had come from. She then told of this episode:

"One morning as I was down preparing breakfast," she said. "a man rang at the door and wanted to see my husband. As he was usually irritable on being called early, I went to him myself. I called him twice, and, as he did not arouse, I asked him if he had heard. 'Of course I heard, he replied. As I was leaving I playfully tapped him on the left cheek with my hand, and said: 'You are not so pleasant with me as you used to be.' The Doctor then called out: 'Grace, she has assaulted me.' Grace came up stairs, and we met in the doorway and jostled against each other. I accidentally hit her, and the Doctor hit me in the eye, blackening it.

"When Henry was leaving the room he put his figerer to his generated.

"When Henry was leaving the room he put his fingers to his nose at me, and I was so ex-asperated that I took up a pitcher of water and flung it on the floor."

apperated that I took up a pitcher of water and flung it on the floor."

The witness said that her husband cursed her, used shocking language, and asserted that she was crazy. On two occasions the Doctor struck her on the back when she was putting on her shoes, and he once struck her on the arm with a chair in his study.

Mrs. Gunning was not allowed to tell the text from which the Doctor preached the Sunday following one of their squabbles. Once when she attended the funeral of a friend, and while she was looking at the remains, her husband tool her that nobody wanted her there. At an Italian tea at the De Kaib Avenue Methodist Church her husband and the children never spoke to her for a moment during the evening. Her husband wouldn't allow her to get any ice cream, and the children taunted her about it on her way home.

She did not leave the house until her husband absolutely refused to speak to her. She admitted that she had broken dishes, a plaster of Paris bust, and some other things, when experated by the conduct of her husband and the children.

Mrs. Gunning's cross-examination will go on

Mrs. Gunning's cross-examination will go on day. Dr. Gunning's defence will be that his ife's violent temper was responsible for all the touble.

Among the passengers who sailed from Havre on the French line steamer La Gascogne on her last trip west was an undersized Belgian, who gave his name as Leon Istace. The man was a second cabin passenger, and during the voyage over he spent money very freely. His liberality made him many friends, and when the steamer was about two days out, he was the most popular man in the second cabin. On the third day out he got up a game of cards, which was continued night and day during the rest of the trip. Istace lost 1,200 francs altogether, he says, but he didn't seem to mind that in the least, as be

When La Gascogne reached her dock yesterday morning Istace was saying farewell to the friends he had made on the voyage, when United States Deputy Marshal Bernard stepped up and informed him that he was under arrest. Istace doesn't speak English, but a passenger who did, and spoke French as well, acted as interpreter and informed him of his predicament. The man made no resistance, but accompanied the mar-

The man made no resistance, but accompanied the marshal to the Federal building, where, in Commissioner Alexander's room, they found the Belgian Consul waiting for them. The Consul told the prisoner that he had masqueraded under the mane of Istace long enough, and that he had better admit he was Henry Augustin, and that while in the employ of the Government as a postal clerk he had embezzled 10,000 france. Istace admitted his identity. The Consul then requested Commissioner Alexander to commit the man to Ludlow street jail until Feb. 24, and this was done.

Augustin was, up to Jan. 30 of the present year, a money order clerk in the Post Office at Palescul, in the province of Luxembourg. He forged Government receipts for the money turned over to him for weeks before he was discovered. Then he fled, taking the greater part of the money thus obtained with him. The Belgian authorities were informed that he had obtained a passport under the name of Leon Istace, and by means of this passport they traced him to Havre. Detectives arrived in Havre the day after he sailed on La Gascogne. They immediately cabled to the Consul here to have the man arrested when he arrived.

Augustin had 6,640 francs in his possession. He admitted losing 1,200 francs in gambling on the voyage over. The rest of the stolen inoney he spent before sailing and during the voyage. The man refused to make any statement further than to admit his guilt, and to say that a passion for cards and other forms of gambling had caused his downfall.

Plage was dumfounded in the morning when he found himself in a cell, and it was only after considerable reflection that he could recall the events of the previous night. The fact that his $150 gold watch and chain and his pocketbook were missing, and that the police knew nothing of them, directed his thoughts immediately to the Henry street house, for he was positive that he had the money and the jewelry when he called there. When he had paid the usual ime imposed by Justice Waish, he informed Capt. Miles O'Reilly of his adventure. The Captain took immediate, if not quite legal, measures to clear up the mystery by going to the Henry street house and arresting Elizabeth O'Donohue and Elizabeth Melnerny, the two girls with whom Mr. Plage had the filtration, and four other girls found at the house. As Mr. Plage was unwilling to charge any of them with the robbery, they were all discharged.

Torrey was called before President Scott and the choice of settling certain damages or leaving college was given to him. It is said he expressed his willingness to pay for some of the doors, but would not pay for others which he said he had not damaged. The interview on Wednesday in the President's room was a stormy one. A pair of glasses worn by Torrey was broken in the sculle, so Torrey alleges, and he also is reported to have made the statement that Dr. Scott arruck him. Dr. Scott has made the following statement:

My attention has been called to an article appearing in the New Brunswick Tones of Saturday ovening, of which I have read the headline only. The article evidently refers to a matter concerning which the facts are these: on Wednesday has, in discussing with a student the extent of his obligation to repair damage done to college property, he became insuling in speech and threatening in manner. I took hold of the lapel of his coat and pushed him out of the office, the door before which he stood being ajar. I did not strike him.

He put them out of the house and then demolished some of the furthe house and then demonshed some of the fur-niture. Later he went out and was arrested for being drunk. He was arraigned in the Ewen Street Police Court yesterday. Justice Lambeer sentenced McPhillips to terms of six months each and a line of $50 on the charges of his mother and sister, and an additional three months for being drunk. As McPhillips turned to go to the prisoners' pen he should to his sister: "Fill fix you for fair when I get out."

They did not find anything of value, and in solic of his protestations of poverty they knocked him down and jumped on him. He was left unconscious at the side of the road, and when he revived enough to go on toward the centre of town he was again met by the men, one of whom pulled out a revolver and commanded him to keep mum about what had occurred. He promised to do so, but when he arrived in town he told of his experience. He is positive of the identity of the men, but does not know their names. Arrests are expected. He managed to reach it by piling a chair on a table, but had become exhausted, when water from a hose revived him. Shortly after firemen dragged him to the roof.

When he reached the street he fell on his knees and said: "I prayed for water and it came: I prayed for safety and was saved. The Gesl of my fathers be praised!"

The fire caused about $2,000 damage. Because of the suddenness with which it manifested itself, it will be investigated.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10 .- A special from Whiting. Ind., says: It was reported here last night that the Standard Oil Company had decided, in the light of recent events, to dispense with all the light of recent events to dispense with all the non-English sneaking foreigners now in their employ. It is generally believed that the company's action is the result of many appeals made by residents hore, both in and out of its employment. A public mass meeting has been called for some night this week, at which the situation will be reviewed and plans discussed to put an end to the lawlessness and crime which have existed during the past five years. The number of foreigners employed by the Standard is about 700.

Killed by a Bullet Meant for Another. RUSHVILLE, Ill., Feb. 10.-On Saturday night Fred Johnson and James Elttenhouse became engaged in a quarrel relative to money loaned in a poker game. Johnson attempted to shoot Rittenhouse, who dodged behind Thomas Moore. Moore received the bullet in his brain and died soon afterward. A PAL OF OLD BILL BROCKWAY. Counterfelter Burdell to Be Tried for An Old Offence in Michigan.

TRENTON, Feb. 10,-Judge Green, in the l'nited States District Court, to-day granted an order removing to the Eastern district of Michigan for trial James Burdell, known under the aliases of Charles Harward, James Courtney, and "Little Jim." Burdell, under the name of Courtney, was arrested last August with William E. Brockway, charged with counterfeiting gold and silver certificates and Canadian bonds. With Brockway and others of the gang he was indicted in New Jersey Then it was learned that an indictment found

Then it was learned that an indictment found in June, 1898, was banging over him in Michigan, and the Government decided to have him removed to Michigan for trial. The Michigan indictment charged him with bringing into the United States from Canada $25,000 in counterfeit bills and circulating some of them. In court to-day two of the bills were produced. They have been in the pessession of the Government for twenty-eight years.

Burdell as served an eight years' term in Albany and Jollet, Ill., but never under a Government sentence. His identity has been learned by the Government officers. Charles W. Brooke of New York appeared as his rounsel to-day, and opposed his removal, chiefly on the ground that the law under which the Michigan indictment was found had been repealed. The trial of Brookway is set down for Friday next. He will be defended by ex-Judge William B. Gulid of Newark. Burdell, or Courtney, is now in the Hudson county jail, and Brockway is in the Mercer county jail.

ORPHAN ASYLUM QUARANTINED. An Epidemic of Skin Disease at the Hebrew

Sheltering Guardian Society's Institution. On account of the number of cases of ringworm scalp eczema among the inmates of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society's Orphan Asylum, at Eleventh avenue and 151st street, the buildings of the institution have been placed under quarantine by the Health Board. Skin diseases have been prevalent in the asylum to a greater or less degree since last June and Morris Goodhart, the President of the Board of Managers, said that the shocking condition of affairs was entirely due to the ignorance and incompetency of Dr. William M. Leszynsky, who recently resigned as attending physician. When he resigned Dr. Leszynsky made a long statement in which he charged a lack of intelligence and symmathetic consequences on the part of the which he charged a lack of intelligence and sympathetic cooperation on the part of the President of the loard of Managers; also that the latter had, through one of the assistant physicians, altered his system of treatment and countermanded his orders. President Wilson of the Health Board, who visited the asylum yesterday, said that in a hygieric way the institution was perfect. Every child had a separate towel and after every bath disinfectants were used. The sick children were thoroughly isobated from their well companions. The asylum contains 800 children, and while the quarantine is on 600 of them who attend the public schools will have a vacation.

JERSEY BARBERS UNITED.

They Will Seek to Compel Legal Closing of Shops at Noos on Sunday. The barbers of Jersey City and Newark will make a united effort to have a law passed by the Legislature requiring barber shops to be closed at noon or at 1 P. M. on Sundays. When the movement was started a few weeks ago by the movement was started a few weeks ago by German barbers in Jersey City, it was proposed to exclude Italians from the organizations, but the Italians succeeded in convincing their collaborers of the value of allies in securing the desired legislation. Barbers of every nationality have been admitted to the organization, and at a meeting held on Sunday night in Jersey City, the delegates were American, German, French, Italian, Irish, Rebrew, and negro. A committee was appointed to have a bill drafted and presented to the Legislature this week.

Half Her Sentence Talked Of. Mamie Hughes, 32 years old, of 504 West Twenty-eighth street, pleaded guilty to stabbing Policeman McNamara of Mercer str for assault in the first degree, but was allowed to plead to the second degree, under which she might have been sentenced to five years in prison. After an appeal for mercy by the counsel, Judge MeMahon sentenced the woman, in the General Sessions yesterday, to two years in the pententiary. Then her counsel made another plea, and the Judge scales the sentence to eighteen months. The lawyer kept on pleading, and said that his client had acted under unusual provocation, as the policeman alleged that she was a decent woman. Finally the Judge reduced the sentence to one year, and counsel subsided, for assault in the first degree, but was allowed to Charles Paratina of 687 Marcy avenue, Brooklyn, sold two cigarettes on Sunday to eightryn, soid two eigarettes on Sunday to eight-year-old Arthur Thompson of 176 Kosciusko street. A policeman saw the boy with the eigarettes and arrested Paratina under a section of the Penal Cedo which makes it a misdemean-or to sell tobocco in any form to children under 16. Paratina was arraigned in the Gates Ayenna Court yesterday and held for trial.

Lawyer Murphy and His Client Indicted Ex-Assemblyman William D. Murphy and his lient, John J. Humphrey, who were arrested in the Supreme Court last week before Justice Dugro in the begus ciaim case against the Blecker Street Savings liank, were indicated for nerjury by the Grand Jury yesterday. Lawyer Mucphy was indicted twice, once for perjury and again for subornation of perjury.

Hold Hardines on Sunday. Josephine Mangerson, who keeps a delicatesen store at 149th street and Morris avenue, sold a box of sardines for eight cents on Sunday and was arrested by Policeman Devlin of the Mor-risania station for violating the Sunday iaw. She was locked up all night, and was held in $300 bail for trial by Magistrate Wentworth yesterday.
